

Artist Page

Our group decided to have a large top banner showcasing the feel of the artist. In the center, our website would present a head shot of the artist in a circle. The name of the artist would be in black and bold, with a small shadow, to let users know the name of the artist, but also leave space for the rest of the website. A video, showcasing the artists recent or popular content, would also be visible when scrolling through the rest of the page, so users could listen to music while reading about the artist. Under the about artist section, there are popular songs from the artist, with short descriptions of each song and the album it came from.

The video showcasing music is the center of attention, so it takes up the majority of the page. There are also small buttons on the top right, which displays the artists social media links: Instagram, Twitter, and YouTube. Our colors are cool blue shades that complement each other, and we boldfaced, increased font, and italicized words for headings and titles. We added more space for easier readability. We intentionally chose to put more of the text on the left hand side, since most people read from left to right. Still, the video, which portrays the music of the artist, encapsulates over half of the page.
